History

The Committee on Cooperation in Latin America (CCLA) began in 1913, an unanticipated outcome of World Missionary Conference, Edinburgh, 1910. The CCLA represented the missionary agencies at work in the West Indies, Mexico, Central and South America. It later became a Division of the Foreign Missions of the National Council of Churches of Christ in the United States.

The CCLA organized and held the Congress on Christian Work in Latin America (CCWLA) first in 1916. Bulletins from this collection indicate that the Congress was called in response to the Edinburgh Conference's lack of discussion on Latin American issues. From 1910-1916, Rev. W.F. Oldham was chairman of the committees whose purpose was to determine topics for discussion and create corresponding commissions.

The CCWLA was intentionally modeled on the Edinburgh Conference of 1910 and was held in Panama City from February 10-20, 1916. In correspondence it is referred to as the "Panama Conference." The attendees included officers and members of mission boards, missionaries, Latin American church leaders, Christian laypersons from North American and Europe, along with businessmen from Latin America in sympathy with the missionary's efforts. Each of the eight commissions' reports were presented and discussed during the daily sessions, while the night and Sunday sessions consisted of inspirational speeches and devotional services.

Each commission's final report reflects a weighty collection of information from missionaries in Latin America. The eight commissions created separate questionnaires and sent these to correspondent missionaries in Latin America. The missionaries' responses were reviewed and incorporated into the final report of each commission.

In order to implement the resolutions of the CCWLA, sectional conferences were later held in Peru, Chile, Argentina, Brazil, Cuba, and Mexico from March to April of 1916. These conferences were to serve two purposes. First, they allowed for a local discussion of the issues raised by the commissions' final reports. Secondly, they served to bring the resolutions of the conference into the mission churches operating at the local level.

Collection Scope and Content Note

The collection is set up in two series:

- Series 1: Committee on Cooperation in Latin America, 1915 – 1956 (2 boxes, 1 lin. ft.)
This series contains information on the planning of the CCLA, correspondence, conferences and other information relevant to the organization. It sets the preliminary stages for the Congress on Christian Work in Latin America, as well as shows the continued work of the organization after 1916.
- Series 2: Congress on Christian Work in Latin America, 1914-1916 (11 boxes, 5 lin. ft.)
The records of the Congress on Christian Work in Latin America consist of the reports, correspondence, publications, and other related administrative records of this congress spanning the years from 1914 -1916.

The majority of the collection consists of the commissions' questionnaires along with the reports received from Protestant missionaries in Latin America and final reports of the Commissions. This collection also includes minutes from the congress, newspaper articles reflecting on the significance of the congress, along with some materials from the later sectional conferences described above.

The bulk of the collection consists of missionaries' reporting on a wide variety of subjects corresponding to the theme of each commission. The arrangement is in a single series following the eight Commission themes:

Commission I. Survey and Occupation

This entailed a survey of Latin America's physical, industrial, moral, social and religious conditions. It also gives a broad description of the occupation of Protestant missions in Latin America.

Commission II. Message and Method

This examined problems facing missionaries in their presentation of the gospel in Latin America. It especially focuses on Protestant missionaries' potential contributions to Latin America's Roman Catholic and indigenous faith practicing populations.

Commission III. Education

This evaluated the potential of mission schools as opposed to state and Roman Catholic institutions. Special focus is paid to religious education through Sunday schools, along with the potential for higher theological education.

Commission IV. Literature

This analyzed the influence of evangelical literature in Latin America with the goal of expanding its circulation.

Commission V. Women's Work

This tells of the position and influence of women in Latin America. It determines methods for helping Latin America in those social problems affecting the life and work of women.

Commission VI. The Church in the Field

This analyzed the organization of Latin American mission churches. Attention is paid to membership, forms of financial support, the development of leaders, the spiritual life of these congregations, and the mission church's relationship to each country's respective governments.

Commission VII. The Home Base

This promoted interest and financial support for Latin America in the U.S. home base. Concerns about publicity, educational materials, and the promotion of mission work among U.S. Christian students are addressed.

Commission VIII. Co-operation and Union

This studied the cooperation among Protestant denominations' missionaries in the areas of literature, education, and occupation of the territory. The problem of Christian union is addressed while hope is expressed for continuing cooperation as modeled by the congress.

Processing

When the Burke Library acquired the Congress' papers, an attempt was made to maintain the original order imposed on the contents.

Folded materials were flattened. Newspaper clippings were photocopied onto acid free paper. Staples, rubber bands, and metal clips were removed and replaced with plastic clips. All materials were placed in acid-free folders and boxes.

The information relating to two former partial numbering sequences of folders is retained in this finding aid and these numbers, where available, are to be found at the end of each folder description, in the form [14 / A. 920] or [A. 942] .

In 2014, the collection was updated as part of the Henry Luce Foundation grant. It was also during this time that additions from a group of unprocessed and unorganized material were integrated. The original materials are now included in series 2: Congress on Christian Work in Latin America, along with a few additions. Series 1: Committee on Cooperation in Latin America is newly available and integrated into the collection.
