History

The World Missionary Conference, held at Edinburgh in 1910, was preceded by five interdenominational conferences convened by societies for foreign missions in both Great Britain and the United States. The first conference held in 1888 in London, England was the first attempt to study and distribute information regarding missionary work throughout the world. This was followed in 1900 by a larger, "ecumenical," meeting of delegates sent from societies for foreign missions based in the United States, Canada, Great Britain and Europe, intending to represent the work of Protestant missionaries in the whole of the inhabited world. This gathering took place in New York City at Carnegie Hall, with over 50,000 attending.

Many of those involved in the successful 1900 conference resolved that there should be another conference held in ten years on the other side of the Atlantic. On 29 January, 1907, thirty-seven delegates from twenty Scottish foreign missions committees or boards, unanimously agreed at a meeting held in Glasgow that a Missionary Conference should be held in Edinburgh in June of 1910.

This Conference would be structured largely on the model of the 1900 New York conference, being composed of delegates from foreign missions societies actively supporting missionaries in the field and spending no less than £2000 on their foreign work annually. Each society was entitled to send another delegate for every additional £4000 spent. With the constitution of the Conference decided, three points regarding the subject matter to be addressed during the Conference were agreed upon: The Conference would only deal with missionary work among non-Christian peoples; it would only address the most urgent and immediate problems facing the Church; no opinion on ecclesiastical or doctrinal questions would be expressed by the Conference.

The Conference began to differ from previous gatherings in the truly international scope of its objectives. An international Committee of eighteen members was appointed from the United States, Great Britain and Canada, in order to frame the program and to oversee the arrangements for carrying it out. The first meeting at Oxford of this international committee decided: the choice of subjects on which the Conference would concentrate; the resolution to prepare and present these subjects through careful inquiry and study by appointed commissions; the selection of men and women to act on these commissions; the appointment of J.H. Oldham as the full-time Secretary for the preparation of the Conference. The meeting at Oxford established the overall structure and method of gathering, interpreting and presenting the information to the Conference. The subject themes were arranged according to eight Commissions (for details, see below).

The sessions of the World Missionary Conference were held from June 14-23, 1910 in Edinburgh, Scotland, with Dr. John R. Mott as Chairman. On Tuesday, 21 June, Commission VIII put a proposal before the Conference for the formation of a Continuation Committee to oversee the work begun by the Conference in the following years. The proposal received unanimous approval.

The work of the Continuation Committees continued from 1911 onward. The bulk of the Burke Library's records from these Committees date from 1911 to 1918. Geographically, the Continuation Committee and its sectional conferences took place worldwide, but there was a significant concentration of efforts on China, East Asia and India. The areas of concern to these conferences seemed primarily to be within Christian education and literature.

The 2010 conference was modeled after the eight-commission structure of the 1910 World Missionary Conference in order to conduct a thorough historical examination of Christian mission over the last 100 years and also to examine the current and future situation of a truly global Christianity. In June 2010, a delegate conference was held in Edinburgh with representatives from the Evangelical, Protestant, Orthodox and Pentecostal churches, and the Roman Catholic Church. It produced a Common Call to mission.

That same year, three other major conferences were held to commemorate Edinburgh 2010. The first was held in Tokyo; the second in Cape Town, South Africa and the third was held in Boston. The meetings in Edinburgh and Boston were more ecumenical in representation, and the meetings in Tokyo and Cape Town were primarily evangelical. The Tokyo meeting was organized and designed for evangelical mission leaders, and the Cape Town meeting was organized and designed for a broad representation of Church and mission leaders.

- Series 2: Continuation Committees, 1886-1947 (12 boxes, 5.50 lin. ft.)

Commissioners from the WMC continued work after Edinburgh in conferences taking place around the world. This series contains reports, administrative correspondence, lists of delegates, papers, minutes, and printed and published materials from Continuation Committee meetings and Area Conferences after 1910. The concentration of efforts in China, Japan, and East Asia is apparent.

Korean, Japanese and Chinese additions are stamped with "Copied for Church Committee." It is apparent by the annotations and stamps on the records that they were included for informational purposes to members of WMC. The Congress on Christian Work in Latin America sources was also included in this same manner. The Congress on Christian Work in Latin America (CCWLA) was an unanticipated outcome of World Missionary Conference, Edinburgh, 1910. Bulletins from this collection indicate that the Congress was called in response to the Edinburgh Conference's lack of discussion on Latin American issues.

For WMC Special Committee on Statistics, see WMC 1910 Series 1: box 12.

- Series 3: General, 1907-2010 (3 boxes, 1.50 lin. ft.)

This series contains administrative and any other records related to and involving the World Missionary Conference, which did not specifically involve the Commissions of the Continuation Committee. Series 3 also includes information on events leading up to and involving the 50th and 100th anniversaries of the WMC.

Processing

Metal clips and staples were removed from materials and folded items were flattened. Materials were placed in new acid-free folders and boxes. Acidic items were separated from one another by interleaving with acid-free paper as needed. Any items in an advanced state of deterioration were placed in Mylar envelopes.

Collection was originally processed in 2006 and known as MRL12: World Missionary Conference Records, Edinburgh, 1910. The collection was updated with additions as part of the Henry Luce Foundation project in 2013. A number of papers were transferred from unprocessed records. At this time the name of this collection was changed to MRL12: World Missionary Conference Records, 1883-2010.

Due to rearrangement and addition of records, box numbers have changed from the finding aid created in 2006. Basic changes are as follows, further questions can be sent to archives staff:

The Missionary Research Library was founded by John Mott in 1914, an outcome of the World Missionary Conference. Therefore many of the collections contained within this record group pertain to WMC. Charles Luther Boynton Papers, John Mott Papers, the Foreign Missions Conference of North America Records, the Student Volunteer Movement Records, and the International Missionary Council Records are just a few offered in the Missionary Research Library. Pertinent collections are also available in the William Adams Brown Ecumenical Library Archives, such as the World Council of Churches Records.

Information on these records can be located through the Burke Library Archives website: <http://library.columbia.edu/indiv/burke/archives.html> or by contacting archives staff at archives@uts.columbia.edu.
