Biography

Josiah Strong was born January 19, 1847 in Naperville, Illinois. He was a descendant of Elder John Strong, one of the early settlers in 17th century Puritan Massachusetts. He spent the remainder of his childhood in Naperville and experienced an evangelical conversion at the First Congregational Church as a young teen. Afterward he attended Western Reserve College; following graduation in 1869, he enrolled at Lane Theological Seminary in Cincinnati and was ordained Minister. Not long after ending his studies at Lane in 1871, he married Alice Bisbee of Chardon, Ohio. Rev. Strong spent some time as Pastor of a home missionary church in Cheyenne, Wyoming.

From 1877-1883, Rev. Strong was Pastor of the First Congregational Church of Sandusky, Ohio. It was there that he became aware of the major social problems within America and what inspired him to eventually become involved with the Social Gospel movement. This was a Protestant Christian intellectual movement that was most prominent in the early 20th century United States and Canada. The movement applied Christian ethics to social problems, especially issues of social justice such as economic inequality, poverty, alcoholism, crime, racial tensions, slums, unclean environment, child labor, inadequate labor unions, poor schools, and the danger of war.

Beginning in 1885, Strong published several influential books that dealt with religious solutions for social and economic problems, and emphasized interdenominational cooperation to achieve these social goals. Among his most widely read and influential published works are: Our Country: Its Possible Future and Present Crisis, New Era, The Twentieth Century City, The Times and Young Men, Religious Movements for Social Betterment, and The Challenge of the City.
Strong served as General Secretary of the Evangelical Alliance for the United States from 1886-1898, a coalition of Protestant missionary groups. In reaction to the Evangelical Alliance’s lack of involvement in what he saw as an urgent need to deal with social problems in late 19th century USA, he founded the League for Social Service in 1898, which in 1902 was re-named the American Institute of Social Service, an organization to “promote social and industrial betterment.” Strong edited its magazine, The Gospel of the Kingdom. He is considered a leader of the Third Great Awakening, a hypothetical historical period proposed by William G. McLoughlin that was marked by religious activism in American history and spans the late 1850s to the early 20th century.

Strong had three daughters named Mary, Elsie, and Margery, and one son, Howard. Mary died tragically in 1894. Strong appears to have been close to his children, as evident in his correspondence with his daughters in the collection. Strong died on April 28, 1916.

Publications by Strong are:

- Our Country: Its Possible Future and Its Present Crisis, 1885
- The New Era, 1893
- The Twentieth Century City, 1898
- The Times and Young Men, 1901
- The Next Great Awakening, 1902
- Religious Movements for Social Betterment
- The Challenge of the City, 1907
- My Religion in Everyday Life, 1910

Collection Scope and Content Note

The collection consists of personal papers and correspondence of Rev. Josiah Strong and showcase his international role as delegate for the Evangelical Alliance, as well as his interests in Turkey and South America. The bulk of the collection are the notes, manuscripts, news clippings and other papers compiled between the 1930s and 1969 by his daughters, Elsie and Margery Strong, for an unpublished manuscript of their father’s life, Josiah Strong: Social Pioneer. This manuscript was worked on for several decades by the daughters and Nathaniel Pratt, Charles Macfarland, C. Howard Hopkins, and Dorothea Muller.
The collection is organized into two series:

- Series 1: Josiah Strong Biography Drafts, 1855 - 1916 (4 boxes, 2.00 lin. ft.)
  This series contains Josiah Strong Biography manuscript drafts by Elsie Strong with commentary notes by Margery Strong. Drafts are subdivided into Parts 1-4, and these parts are further divided by chapter. Chapters encapsulate Strong’s entire life, from early childhood and background, early influences, his time out west as a missionary, his role in social service and religion, and later years.

  - Subseries 1A: Josiah Strong Personal Papers
    Contains correspondence and notes specifically written by Josiah Strong himself. Of note is a travel diary from Strong's trip to South America in Box 4 Folders 7-8.

- Series 2: Correspondence, 1883-1969 (2 boxes, 0.50 lin. ft.)
  This series is arranged in chronological order, and broken in two sections.

  This series contains correspondence from and to Josiah Strong. He corresponded with many famous people from notable organizations. For example in Folder 5 are letters from Theodore Roosevelt and Jacob Riis. Other individuals of note were WJ Pratt, William Dodge, Philip Schaff, founder of Howard University Major General Oliver O. Howard, Walter Rauschenbusch and Woodrow Wilson. Organizations and topics in his correspondence include but are not limited to the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions (ABCFM), the Evangelical Alliance, the Women’s Christian Temperance Union, the situation in Turkey in 1896 and the missionaries there, the YMCA, and various divinity schools and seminaries. Rev. Strong’s influence in the missionary world is apparent in letters discussing the massacres in Turkey and in his role in selecting the Minister to Constantinople.

  Box two of the correspondence was between his daughters Elsie and Margery to those involved with the biography, including publishers, scholars, and universities. The letters also perhaps explain why the biography was never published, as several people writing in the 1960s allude to Strong’s documents, held at the UTS library, were destroyed by a staff member or perhaps by members of Strong’s family in the 1930s. These can be viewed in Box 2, Folder 8.

Processing

Metal clips and staples were removed from materials and folded items were flattened. Materials were placed in new acid-free folders and boxes. Acidic items were separated from one another by interleaving with acid-free paper as needed.

The Strong Papers have been organized and reorganized by many people throughout the years. In 2015, the finding aid was completed as part of the Henry Luce Foundation grant. Along with the finding aid, a detailed inventory was created by Margaret Kaczorowski before description and processing was undertaken. To find out more about what was included in this inventory, please contact Burke Library staff by email at: burkearchives@library.columbia.edu.
Josiah is indicated as JS, Elsie is ES and Margery is MS noted throughout the finding aid.
