

Publication Agreement Addendum
Columbia University Open Access Policy & Scholarly Uses

This Amendment is made a part of the publication agreement between the Publisher and the Author named below with respect to the following Article:

To the extent there is any conflict between this Amendment and the publication agreement, this Amendment will control. The parties understand that this Amendment is intended in part to satisfy the requirements of the Open Access policy of Columbia University as may be applicable to the Article.

1. Without suggesting any limit on other rights that the Author may have with respect to the Article, the Author retains the nonexclusive right to use, reproduce, distribute, create derivative works, and display, the final published version of the Article in print, electronic, or digital form for the purposes set forth below. To the extent that the Article includes edits and other contributions by the Publisher, the rights of the Author with respect to the Article include the right to use such edits and contributions.

1.1 The Author shall at any time have the right to make, or to authorize others to make, a preprint or a final published version of the Article available in digital form over the Internet, including, but not limited to, on a website under the control of the Author or the Author's employer or through digital repositories including, but not limited to, those maintained by scholarly societies, funding agencies, or the Author's employer or academic institution. This right shall include, without limitation, the right of the Author to permit public access to the Article as part of a repository or through a service or domain maintained by the Author's employing institution or professional society, or by a service as required by law or by agreement with a funding agency. [Examples of such repositories include SSRN, arXiv.org, PubMed Central, and Academic Commons at Columbia University.]

1.2 The Author may revise and publish the Article in another scholarly journal, in a book, or by other means. The Author may exercise this right of publication only after the date of first publication of the Article by the Publisher in any format.

1.3 The Author shall, without limitation, have the right to use the Article in any form or format in connection with the Author's teaching, conference presentations, lectures, other scholarly works, and for all of Author's academic and professional activities.

2. The Author requests that the Publisher sign a copy of this Amendment and return it to the Author. However, if the Publisher publishes the Article in any form, regardless of whether it has signed this Amendment, such publication manifests the Publisher's assent to the terms of this Amendment.

Name of Publisher: _____

Name and Signature of Representative: _____

Name and Signature of Author: _____